As a fan project, the game was originally designed to become a 'tribute' to the original resident bad games. You know, because in time the residents of Capcom were being a little more shy about details on bad 2 change. Using a name Will be proud of The Aldi, in a report via DSOGaming, a new brand has been released for demo games that you can now try! What do we know about the game? The game will highlight the survival aspects set up in a home with more than a few puzzles to solve. In other words, it's very like 'resident evil'. Perhaps for legal needs, however, they are going to distance one's own as much as possible. While Capcom is probably one of the better 'companies for fan games', each has their limitations. While the game was initially planned to be released for free, it seems that the water may now be a little more blurry in terms of them. The demo, however, is free to download and try now. If you do, so, want to let it go, it's available here via link! Also, if you want to keep up to date with the latest developments, you can visit your official Facebook site via link here! what do you think? Will you try the demo? – Tell us in comments!
